

HAND CARVED BOWL AFTER LEROY SETZIOL

Description

A turned wood vessel with a hand-carved, Mayanesque glyph motif, its craft pedigree evidenced by a rim that is ever so slightly out-of-round, and floating over a shallow, recessed foot. Likely a rosewood species with a deep, reddish hue, exceptional figure, and an even, mellow patina. From a Portland architect's estate, attributed to Leroy Setziol, circa 1970.
